Does Your Pet Have Seasonal Allergies?

PET MARKET

- Dog and cat allergies often take the form of skin irritation or inflammation.
- If your pet has allergies, their skin will become very itchy. They'll start scratching excessively, and might bite or chew at certain areas of their body.
- Inflamed and infected areas of the skin, known as hot spots, can develop as well on dogs (hot spots are rarely seen in cats).
- Some other signs that your pet might have seasonal allergies are itchy ears, running nose, watery eyes, coughing and sneezing.
- Try hypoallergenic EarthBath products and antihistamine tablets from Sentry for allergy relief!
